

Lunesdale Learning Trust: QES & QESstudio

Opportunities to get involved with Governance as Members, Trustees or Local Governors

Most people are probably aware that the inception of the Studio School in September 2017 necessitated the setting up of the Lunesdale Learning Trust to incorporate both QES and the new school. This involved the evolution of the Queen Elizabeth School Governing Body into a three-tier system of Members, Trustees and Local Governors. Fortunately, we had sufficient people already involved in QES Governance to fill all the vacancies existing at each level, thereby ensuring stability and continuity during the transition to a two-school system.

We are now in a position, however, to begin to recruit the next generation of Members, Trustees and Governors and wish to invite expressions of interest from anyone who feels they have the experience, expertise, commitment and time to contribute to the Governance of the schools as we move to the next exciting phase of development. We are particularly keen to meet professionals used to taking responsibility and making decisions.

We realize that people may be uncertain about the nature of these roles and the likely demands and time commitment involved. We do have, however, a degree of flexibility and at this stage simply want to elicit expressions of interest before explaining in some detail just what's involved.

So...if you are interested and want to find out more, simply email me at c.clarke@lunesdaletrust.co.uk with your contact details and I'll get in touch to arrange an informal meeting. All responses to be received by 15 December.

QES always had a fine reputation for the quality of its governance and we are very determined to ensure that the new Multi-Academy Trust will prosper with the support of people who share the vision of the very best education for all in the community.

With best wishes
